

ABSTRACT

Methods of sample loading and separation in a microfluidics device are described. The methods provide high resolution and high signal intensity, using, in a preferred embodiment, a simple two-electrode injection scheme with transient isotachophoretic
5 (ITP) stacking.

10034278.12281